

A Visit to a Book Fair Essay - 300 Words

When our teacher informed us that we were scheduled to visit a book fair at Pragati Maidan, we were all very excited. When the day of the visit arrived, all students gathered near the library of our school as pre-decided.

Three teachers were also going to accompany us. When all the students had arrived, a total of 64 students and 3 teachers in three buses set out to visit the book fair. We reached the book fair at Pragati Maidan at around 11:30 A.M.

When we reached there, what we saw left our eyes wide open. Pragati Maidan, filled with hundreds of thousands of colorful books looked so amazing that it was difficult for us to even imagine it. As many book lovers had gathered in the fair as there were books.

There were all kinds of books in the book fair. Some bookstalls had only novels, some had children's books. The shops of film magazines, comics and other story books had a separate department. A large number of children were flipping through books. In a bookstall, I saw four book lovers discussing something and pointing to a picture in a book.

Some people were so engrossed in reading books that they had no idea about what was happening around them. A short distance away from the books' stalls, there were also hotels with various delicious dishes. There was a lot of crowd there too. Apart from this, there was also a section in the book fair where you could seek help about any book you wanted.

Overall, it was a great experience watching the book fair. I would say, if you have never been to a book fair, you must try it once and I bet it would be an experience of a lifetime.

Important Note: Essay on a visit to a book fair in 200 or 250 words can be derived from the above 300-word essay by restricting the details slightly.